PG DIPLOMA IN HISTORICAL STUDIES AND CULTURAL PERSPECTIVES

COURSE BROCHURE (2026-27)

INTRODUCTION

We offer a PG Diploma in Historical Studies online course to make students learn about trans-disciplinary studies and understand the geographical conditions of state locations, locals, and tribal communities' preferences. The course modules are detailed with study of ethnography, critical theory, language preservation, societal implications, and many other interdisciplinary fields are stated for understanding old social context and modern world complexities. This course also entails a case study of the economic dynamics of trade and commerce in Ancient India and its global approach. An interdependent background is elaborated in modules to help students understand and resolve modern world affairs.

MISSION:

- In comparison to historical context and modern world scenario, students will explore traditional societies, modern societies, and cultural concepts to develop critical thinking, analytical, and communication skills.
- To encourage students to understand cultural achievements in literature, art, architecture, and philosophy of Ancient India, and build a diplomatic approach to cultural perspectives.

OBJECTIVES:

- Fostering an understanding of how historical contexts shape current debates on gender equality and educating students with research and analytical skills.
- To analyze the cultural diversity of Ancient India and the processes of cultural synthesis that occurred, fostering a rich tapestry of artistic, linguistic, and religious traditions.
